Summer Enviro-Adventure Camp for Kids! June 22-26 A Natural Science Camp presented by Fullerton Arboretum

(FULLERTON, CA) This summer, June 22-26, the Fullerton Arboretum is pleased to present a new summer camp for elementary age children--we call it Summer Enviro-Adventure Camp.

During this special week, we'll engage the children of our community in our natural environment through hands-on activities specially chosen to develop a wonder and appreciation for nature.

We'll take campers to a different area of the Arboretum each day to experience the diversity of plant and animal life in our own habitat and around the globe. Guided by our kid-loving nature guides, campers will head under the rainforest canopy, into conifer and deciduous forests, through the desert and to the edge of the pond!

As campers travel to a different fascinating environment each day, they will examine a variety of amazing plant and animal life, study the science of how plants grow and adapt to their environments, explore the ways plants, animals and humans all depend on each other, and discover ways to help keep our planet green.

Campers will transform into tree detectives, create their own soil, build miniature ecosystems, explore the hidden world in a drop of water, discover dendrochronology, make acorn cap whistles, grind corn, winnow chaff, and much, much more!

This summer, the children attending our camp will enjoy an outstanding encounter with the amazing wonders of our natural world. So bring your child to the Fullerton Arboretum to join in our Enviro-Adventure!
